Unser Schreiben vom:

Rt. Hon. Arthur Henderson, P.C.
Transport House,

London SW.1.

Sir,

It is with great pleasure I read your address at a recent dinner given by the Labour Party. I was especially pleased to note how you pointed out the fact that the German government has over and over again accentuated that the German people want peace. And this from none less than you one week before the Chancellor once more expounded Germany's greatest desire :

" More than anything else we want peace,
" more than anything else we want leisure
" to put our own house in order in our
" own way."

If only more Englishmen, whose friendship and co-operation we value so highly would give us the same fair treatment as you have shown, I am convinced that the work of international cooperation between Great Britain and Germany would be greatly accelerated.

Sincerely yours,

Ernst Hanfstaengl
Chief of Foreign Press Bureau.
